PRESENTERS

Commissioner Charles H. Ramsey, Philadelphia Police Department

Commissioner Charles H. Ramsey leads the fourth largest police department in the nation with 6,500 and 800 civilian members. He was appointed Philadelphia Police Commissioner in 2008. Commissioner Ramsey brings forty-six years of law enforcement service, experience and expertise to the post. Before taking the helm in Philadelphia, he served as Washington, D.C. Police Chief. While he was Chief of the Metropolitan Police Department (1998-2006) crime rates in the nation's capital declined by about 40 percent, and the district regained its reputation as a national leader in urban policing. Before D.C., he was a Deputy Superintendent in the Chicago Police Department. There, he was instrumental in designing and implementing the Chicago Alternative Policing Strategy that became a nationally acclaimed model of community policing.

Commissioner Ramsey has worked diligently to advance the law enforcement profession. He has long been at the forefront of developing innovative policing strategies, evidence-based initiatives, organizational accountability and neighborhood-based programs, while leading organizational change in police departments. As president of major city chiefs, Ramsey created the Leadership Executive Institute to help prepare police chiefs of the future. Working with the Anti-Defamation League and the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, he led the creation of law enforcement and society: lessons from the holocaust. More than 90-thousand local, state and federal law enforcement personnel from across the country have gone to see the program. He is currently working with The National Constitution Center to develop a program for recruits and in-service training that focuses on the role of policing in a complex democratic society.

Under his leadership, the Philadelphia Police Department has continued to make significant progress in driving down violent crime in the city. From 2007, when there were 396 homicides in Philadelphia to last year, when the number of people murdered in the city was 248, the homicide rate dropped 37%, a 50% drop in homicides compared to the city's 1990 peak of 500. In 2014 the city experienced fewer violent crimes than at any time since 1985.

Commissioner Ramsey is nationally and internationally recognized among law enforcement peers for his law enforcement expertise. He is the immediate past President of the Police Executive Research Forum and the Major Cities Chiefs Association. He is the only law enforcement professional to have been president of both of these prominent positions simultaneously. He also serves on the International Association of Chiefs of Police Executive Committee.

Recently President Barack Obama called on Commissioner Ramsey to co-chair the President's Task Force on 21st Century Policing as it seeks ways to help strengthen police community relations across the country. He also serves on the United States Homeland Security Advisory Council, which provides advice and recommendations to the US Department of Homeland Security Secretary, Jeh Johnson. In 2007, Ramsey was a security consultant to the United States Senate Sergeant of Arms and the Washington, D.C. Convention Center. During that year, he served on the Independent Commission on Security Forces of Iraq, leading a prominent group of law enforcement professionals in a review of Iraqi Police Forces. The report they generated was submitted to the United States Congress and garnered international attention and praise.

A native of Chicago, Illinois, Ramsey served in the Chicago Police Department for nearly three decades in a variety of assignments.

He holds Bachelor's and Master's degrees in criminal justice from Lewis University in Romeoville, Illinois. Commissioner Ramsey has lectured nationally on a wide range of law enforcement topics.
